

The Lancaster Gazette.

The Vallandigham-Hough Correspondence.

The Cincinnati papers have looked up and published an interesting correspondence which took place between the distinguished nominee for Governor of the Democracy, and a crack-brained fellow by the name of Sabin Hough, who pretended to sport the title of 'Rev.' but who could find no congregation in the loyal States to listen to his theology.

In the Spring of 1861, he engaged in the publication of a periodical of sectional prophecies. Of course, in embarking in an enterprise of that description, he would seek the advice, aid and comfort of those in sympathy with his paper and the cause it advocated. Soon after the commencement of the publication of his paper, he was arrested on a charge of treason, but discharged. On his examination letters were found with him, which were read in the evidence, and among which are the following from Mr. Vallandigham. They show, at least, that he has been consistent in his belief that nothing but separation is in the future—South from the North, and then—West from the East, and then—he knows not what:

DATTON, Ohio, April 26, 1861.
Rev. Sabin Hough:

DEAR SIR.—I thank you most cordially for your letter of the 24th. It strengthens me in the cause of truth and right. Its words are fitly and truly spoken. This folly and madness and wickedness must soon have an end. "How long, O Lord?" We shall see. It is written that blessed are the peacemakers, and the whole church of the Prince of Peace is maddening and thirsting for blood—the blood of our brethren—preaching, praying, fighting. Was ever a people before delivered over to such folly and wickedness? Truly you have said it is from hell and not from heaven. I thank you for your pamphlet. I have distributed all but one copy for myself. I send you a copy of my speech of February 20, 1861. But all is over now. It is too late for anything but peaceful separation. Very truly,
C. L. VALLANDIGHAM.

DATTON, April 30, 1861.
Rev. Sabin Hough, Cincinnati, Ohio:

DEAR SIR—I have just received yours, and concur with you heartily.—The storm is passing, and I hope reason may return, and peace, for the present, with it. But I see nothing but separation—first of the free States and the slave, and then of the West from the East, and then—I know not what.

Very truly,
C. L. VALLANDIGHAM.
Mr. Vallandigham still entertains the same opinion. Separation is inevitable, and the United States Government is powerless to prevent it. Entertaining these views from the beginning he has regarded expenditure of money and the effusion of blood as unnecessary, useless and wicked, and hence his advice was in the beginning not to engage in the war, and the same opinion leads him to advise a withdrawal of our armies from the South and give up the contest. This is the most charitable construction we can put on Mr. Vallandigham's conduct.—Sandusky Register.

The Difference Between Union Men and those who Call Themselves Democrats.

We have collated the following sentiments in order that our readers may see the difference between loyal Democrats and Butternuts. That faction calling itself Democratic, claims to be loyal. Let the following sentiments determine. Conditional loyalty is little better than unconditional disloyalty:

Although there is a man in offices that I did not help it, there, and although I do not know personally, I am a Union man, yet, in this great contest, I acknowledge the right of the people to choose their own party, but as the head of the Government, as the Executive, I am bound to be true to my duty, to obey them, and to do my best for the welfare of the country.

—And, like a soldier in the ranks, I hold it to be my duty to obey them, and to do my best for the welfare of the country.

—We are for peace, because we are in a position to have it, and we may try, but it will not stick to you. The old soldiers of the revolution, and the patriots of all nations, may say, "we are ready."

—No party ever made open war on any nation, nor can they do so, and to do so is to commit treason.

—The question is, whether the South, Southern League, or Confederacy, is independent of the United States.

—The question is, whether the independence of the South, Southern League, or Confederacy, is independent of the United States.
